St Barth's premier luxury resort is reopening for the season on Oct. 28, Caribbean Journal has confirmed.

The luxury resort is also relaunching with a new general manager, following the recent appointment of Sebastien Maingourd as the property's new regional general manager.

Le Barth, as it's affectionately known, has added a new wellness offering at the resort, the Complete Wellness Experience, Skincare by La Mer.

The program helps guests "reconnect with their inner selves through signature La Mer spa treatments at Le Spa at Le Barthelemy plus two yoga classes and special healthy meal options," according to a statement.

That's along with a new Zero Waste Cooking Class with the head of the hotel's Amis St Barth restaurant, a course that guides guests through an educational experience to limit food waste while supporting local fisherman businesses.
